Friends ;

All who are interested in the welfare of our college, we extend you a hearty greeting.

Ralph Elliott Smith

AS born in Boston, Massachusetts, January 9, 1874. His family soon after moved to Newton, Massachusetts, where he received his early education. He was graduated from the Newton High School with the class of 1890.

Mr. Smith entered the Massachusetts Agricultural College in the fall of 1890 and graduated in 1894. He was class president for one year and played on his class football team for two years. He belongs to the $\Phi. \Sigma. \kappa.$ fraternity.

Soon after graduating Mr. Smith was appointed Instructor of Botany and German at the Massachusetts Agricultural College which position he held until June, 1895, when he was made Assistant Professor of Botany and German. The year 1898 Mr. Smith spent in the University of Munich, Germany, making a specialty of Vegetable Pathology, and during the summers of 1899 and 1900 he pursued the same studies in the Summer Schools of Harvard College. Prof. Smith has for years been interested in the subject of Vegetable Pathology and has been doing a great deal of work along that line in connection with the Department of Vegetable Pathology at the Hatch Experiment Station. He has published a book on "Botrytis and Sclerotuna."

Prof. Smith is a champion of all athletics and has applied himself to the difficult task of placing the athletics at Massachusetts Agricultural College on a firm basis. In doing this he has overcome many difficulties and is almost daily overcoming more. He has made the Alumni realize that in graduating they have not done their whole duty but that each and every alumnus is under an obligation to help his Alma Mater in every way he can, and that the best way an Alumnus can help "Massachusetts" is by helping to support the Athletic Association. Mr. Smith is secretary and treasurer of the Athletic Association. Few members of the Faculty are as popular as Professor Smith. Having been a student at the college under circumstances almost identical with those of many of the present students he appreciates the position of the students better than any other member of the Faculty and he is always willing to lend a helping hand to any one in need. His interest in athletics brings him into close relationship with the fellows, and any one knowing the man cannot help admiring him.

It is because of his gentlemanly manner, his desire to be of service to the students, and as a slight tribute in appreciation of the great work which he is doing for the Athletic Association, that the class of 1903 dedicates this volume of The Index to Ralph Elliott Smith.

A Tribute to Naughty-one.

As flowers bloom through the summer months,
Spreading their fragrance far and near,
Giving, through beauty, to human hearts,
Feelings of hope and of cheer,—

So in our busy, bustling lives,
The friends who to us are so dear,
Are friends by the traits that impress us most;
They depart but the imprint is there.

A class has gone from among us;
It has had its season of growth,
And meanwhile, with earnest endeavor,
Has taught us in war and peace.

We had come to love these brothers so:
Fond worthy of our sacred trust;
But like the short and sweet-lived flowers,
They have shown the path of the just.

We're to watch and guide the brothers
Who have come to us, in turn,
'Till their lives, each with the others,
May be likened to one grand song.

But we shall always remember,
And that with breasts filled with pride,
The class which has gone before us,
On that path of constant rise.

May their path ever lead upward,
And let them not think we forget
The host of ways and the means
By which we, to them, are in debt.

Class History.

IN MANY respects the career of a class in college, strikingly resembles the course of a human life. First of all, there is the same period of infancy. Everything is new and strange and the untried future stretches before, dim and dark and uncertain.

Then comes the season of youth, and with it the days of pranks and scrapes and general recklessness. Then a brief time of early manhood, let us say, when the first taste of power comes and the first sense of any real responsibility is felt. And finally, the rapidly flitting moments of mature age, marked by a full participation in all activities, then by a gradual withdrawal from them, till nothing is left but to look back over the past and forward to the days when, with a short and sudden flash of prominence, there comes the end.

Through all the vicissitudes of the several periods save the last, the class of 1902 has struggled, and just as the curtain rises on the final scenes, we submit to the Index for the last time, our history. As we look back over the long period in which the class has been together, we can now see the picture clearly, freed as it is from the distortion hitherto produced by too short a perspective. Before the faint but uncolored rays which time casts over the scenes, events once thought to be of mountainous importance, are now completely forgotten; others little regarded at the time, now stand out in bold relief. In short, for the first time we get a correct vision of our past career.

Of the early days we need say little. The story has already been told, and at a time when the sufferings and hardships of the Freshman's lot were much more vividly impressed upon our minds. Entering as we did, the first class to be protected by a solicitous Faculty from the hazer's clutches, we have yet much to remember. Not soon will we forget the blustering braggadocio, of "Parmie" and Crowell; the frequent encounters with Naughty-one, the happy moments spent in the mathematical room, not to speak of the instructive hours of Agriculture, all cherished memories. With our Sophomore year, increased burdens came upon us; they were not neglected. Here again it is needless to spend time. Our adventures at Belchertown and within the portals of the Chemical Department are not unknown to men; nor will our unchecked athletic victories be soon forgotten.

Of the events of the Junior year, more might be said. The opening term may be summed up in two words—Index and Physics. Between our Scylla and Charybdis we might well have been crushed forever. Somehow, however, we got out the one, and got out of the other, and thenceforth went our way rejoicing.

The winter term witnessed the bloodless battle of the "Rise, Decline and Fall of Bloxam." Aside from this, there was little of interest. It is true that Clafin with a view of enlivening things a bit, did write an oration on "Laziness is Loneliness," but the English Department suspected a "lack of knowledge of the subject" and the class had to worry along without the benefit of his words of wisdom.

Spring came at last and with it after a huge amount of work and worry, the long-talked of Chemical Trip to the pulp and paper mills of Mt. Tom and Holyoke and the brewery at Springfield, followed in the evening by a rousing banquet tendered to us by the Freshman class. Many were the slanderous statements circulated among the student body after our return; in proof of their total falsity, we need only say that the last man out of the brewery was D. Nelson West. Landscape gardening also occupied much of our leisure time. Few scenes in all history could be more impressive than a view of old Naughty-Two, obediently trotting along in the footsteps of their beloved instructor as he flitted from tree to tree, and singing as they went: "Follow, follow, we will follow Sammy," in rude and rhythmic chorus. The effect was simply sublime and the learning acquired something tremendous. It is true that Rannie did make rather a bad break once in citing as an evergreen, "Pyrus malus—the weeping apple." It may have been too that some few others acquired more skill in such gymnastic exercises as vaulting out a conveniently placed window than they did in the art of home decoration, but after all, these are but mere incidents, absolutely incomparable with the surpassing value of the exercise.

When summer came, we left five or six men as a squad to look after things while we were gone, and the most of us cleared out till fall. When we came back, we found everything in pretty fair condition, though our sentinels seemed to have watched over the treasure up around the plant house a little better than they did over anything else. Claf. performed one of the miracles of the age by staying around and working hard all summer, and what was more, Kinney pretty nearly duplicated the performance. Cook had an eye to business and started to run in opposition to Bodfish with a "weather bureau," all his own; it is not yet known whether he will make a success of it or not. And Carpenter, they say, tore around so fast that his trail got all mixed up so that we find it next to impossible to say where he hadn't been.

The opening of the fall semester found all of us back and one more. As Seniors our career has so far been brief; but no one will say that it has not been characterized by extreme dignity on our part. Why John Hall and Rannie Morse and a few kindred spirits took in the Amherst Fair just to act as a restraining influence on the Freshmen, and everybody knows how well they succeeded. Yet let it not be supposed for a minute that we have made light of our responsibility. Already under our leadership the college has adopted a respectable college yell. Good progress has been made toward a college song. The nickname "Aggie," objectionable for years, has at last been stricken from the students' vocabulary.

It is not to be claimed that these important reforms are due solely to our efforts. Without the co-operation of the Student body, none of them could have succeeded. Yet few reforms ever come without leaders, and to the leader, credit is due. On the other hand, what we have done in no sense exempts us from the consideration of future problems. In the brief time before our active life as a class must end, let us continue the good work and make the entire record of 1902 in example and in actual accomplishments, a record to be envied and remembered.

Class History.

THE history of a people or of a nation is but a record of the facts concerning that people or that nation, so the history of a class is no more than a record of the trials and struggles and conquests of that class.

Taken as we were from the East and West, North and South; taken green from the farm and fresh from the city, we stand as a true representation of a class in college, and a class with life.

That we have not wasted our time, can be attested by almost anyone. We are always up and doing. Whether early or late, it made, or makes no difference, anywhere there is work to be done, anywhere there is information, no matter of what kind to be obtained, anywhere there is any fun to be had, that is where we are.

But to go back to our history where we left it a year ago. After winning the rope-pull we gave our attention to football. From the very first we expected to win this game. By the advice of the Juniors, the freshmen refused to play unless our varsity men were kept out. We agreed to this change with the understanding that the varsity men were to be kept out of all class games. The day of the event came and—well the game was not even interesting. All our fellows had to do was just to pick up the ball and make a touchdown.

Following close upon the ball game came Thanksgiving, and as ever our class, always as one, loathing to separate even for a few days determined to celebrate the recess in Amherst, and thereby hangs a tale. Veritably, no Thanksgiving could be a day of thanks and praise without a good supper. So we hustled around and prepared one of the finest "feeds" that has ever been seen within the walls of any freshman's room.

Soon we went home for the holidays, but after the new year returned, to find ourselves sole guardians and protectors of an unusually large class of the Winter Course Men. And we took good care of them, too. Early in the winter we decided to follow the custom introduced by our foster-fathers of holding a formal Sophomore dinner. A custom which 1902 did not take kindly to, as they have not and never have had the least love or appreciation for the social side of life. Why, they would not even go to

Springfield to attend a complimentary banquet given then by 1904 until they could combine pleasure with business and make the expense of one trip answer for both. So on the night of January 17, we piled into a drag and were drawn swiftly over the road to South Deerfield, receiving the "glad hand" as we passed through Sunderland singing:

The Sophomore's foot is on the ground,
Sunderland, my Sunderland.
We'll do the town up nice and brown,
Sunderland, my Sunderland.
But give us all of thy hotel store,
And we'll leave thy streets forevermore,
And be the happy class of yore,
Sunderland, my Sunderland.

Spring came bringing with it the joys of outdoor sports and the pleasure of listening to two hour lectures on various subjects with side issues on morals and home training. But even these lectures became a true pleasure, for as we sat in that hot room we had ample time to plan just what we would do when we climbed out the windows on Sammy the next hour. O! those were beautiful days without a thought and without a care.

The freshmen refused to play baseball until we broke the rule, which in the Fall had been made for their especial benefit, and allowed the varsity men to play. This left our team badly handicapped as the freshmen had five varsity men and we had but one. Everybody assured us that the game was as good as lost and all we had to do was just to go out and keep the score from running up into the sixties, and the freshmen believing those stories immediately became so busy that they could find no time to play that game only sometime during Commencement Week. But say! that game was a caution to the saints. Our men went out on that diamond with smiling faces and determination to win, and win they did after the most exciting ten-inning game that can be imagined and with a score of 18—13 at that! We can play marbles. So having "bolted" the examination in German we went home.

As the days were beginning to grow shorter and the cold winds to sweep the waters we left our hammocks and our boats and returned to these halls of learning. Here a surprise awaited us. Our well planned "bolt" had failed and we were "stuck," everyone. But our whole time has not been devoted to athletic contests. We have started a new feature in the college, and that is that each class should have a "class song," to be sung while in college. Heretofore the classes have composed and sung their song at the time of their graduation, and such a thing as underclasses having a regular song had not been heard of. Last winter at our Sophomore Dinner, we elected a committee to choose a class song. The committee has performed its work and we now have two class songs. The idea has been picked up by other classes, '04 already having a song and '05 has one in preparation.

But enough of these fond memoirs. It were an easy matter to write on and on about such a class. But those days are past and gone, we must now make the most of the present and prepare for the future. We have treated many things lightly. We have had our fun, at all times, in all shapes, and in all places. We have passed by our cares with a happy laugh and looked at the future only as some vague, incomprehensible monster away off in the distance. Let us still meet our troubles with a hearty laugh, but let us not forget there is a serious side to life for which we must prepare. M.

Class History.

OURS has been a most eventful year in college, and we desire to thank the upperclass men for the training we have received. Entering college with fear and trepidation for the unknown that lay before us, ignorant of so many things that are essential to good living, our knowledge has developed in this one year, to amazing proportions. We do not say this egotistically and without reason, but refer the skeptical to our worthy instructors, especially our Mathematical god-father. Although we would not deign to be presumptuous in saying our class contains prodigies, yet we can honestly confess that we are astonished at what it is bringing forth.

In athletics it is true we have not accomplished wonders; yielding to the inevitable we surrendered our football game to superiors. They, however, did not have the easy time they anticipated, neither did they run the score up to the heavens, while we remained in the lower depths. In basketball the naughty-threes found their match; the score being 9-7 in our favor.

In fact this was the game in which we excelled, defeating both the Seniors and Winter Course men, yielding only to the famous team of 1902, whom we feel bound to honor and hope that we may follow in their footsteps. In baseball we were also defeated, but furnished some excellent material for the varsity, which in a measure compensated our loss.

It is with no little pleasure that we note the ability of our class to introduce new professors to the customs and traditions of college life. Our dearly beloved French professor came to us

Unmoulded and unsung,
But without fear we took the harp,
And while our fingers moved among
The silver strings, no sharp
Or harsh discordant strains
Disturbed the silence of the night
Or racked the weary brain.

But with sweet and gentle voices and skillful fingers, we moulded the plastic clay and sang his praises till the heavens rang with our shouts and the faculty sat down on us, and yet we learned much while under his benign instruction; to record all would require volumes.

The long winter had its pleasures too, no less delightful than the spring. for it brought to us snow-ball fights, rushes in the snow, and "sich like." And then the balmy spring—but why dwell upon these joys, when to lie beneath the lofty elm was more to be desired than the confining class-room. And then too the spring brought us that greatest of blessings our class supper, when the Freshmen trials are over and the Sophomore joys begin. This event will remain a bright spot in our lives, never to be forgotten.

Returning in September with renewed strength and vigor, by contact with Mother Earth, like the fabled giant of old; we met a formidable array of sixty-five adventuresome youths and maidens whose course was in a measure to be shaped by us. We were denied the delightful privilege of rushing this mighty army from the Campus, but used other means of cooling their ardor which, strange as it may seem, appears to possess every youthful aspirant to college life.

Not the least among the achievements of which we boast is our class yell. As progress is the law of nations and men, so the class of '04 concluded that it should be numbered among the progressive workers of the day, and after due deliberation decide to drop the diminutive Aggie and substitute in its stead a larger, broader, more suggestive word and one in honor of our noble state, whose name our college bears—Massachusetts. Other classes followed suit and finally the old college yell has been abandoned and in the future a new and better yell will encourage our teams on to victory, and no college shall be ashamed to be beaten by the "Massachusetts." It is with no little pride therefore that the class of '04 declares that it was the first to take decided action in this matter, which has finally resulted in the decision of the student body to abolish the name Aggie.

One thing we have been sorry to note is the decrease of our membership; but probably it is better that our wings be clipped occasionally lest we fly too high. But we are ready for the battle and will fight to the finish. It was not long after returning this fall, that we fell into the loving clutches of Prof. Ostrander, who has tried to impress upon our weary brains the mysteries of the sine and cosine; but we fear that many of his valuable thoughts have gone off on a tangent. However, our Parson has developed into a mathematical fiend and a profound—sleeper. In chemistry Prof. Howard has had considerable difficulty in making us comprehend the mystery of the atomic theory, perhaps this is because there is only one molecule among our number and he consists of three or four molecules and almost half a dozen atoms. We feared one time that we should lose him, but now are happy in the fact that he will remain, but if he would take a little brotherly counsel, we would advise him not to eat so much since he is keeping store, lest he change the constitution of his matter and burst; and as we have no formulæ at present by which we could arrange his atoms, the event is horrible to contemplate.

Our Dutch blood is getting so sluggish that der Herr Smith is becoming disgusted with our thick tongues and thicker brains. We would not forget to mention the fact that the Cadet Band, now become famous, was composed at its beginning for the most part from our class. But why enumerate any more of our accomplishments—'twould take a volume to comprise them. Taken all in all, we are a happy-go-lucky class, ready for a tumble anytime and still maintain our rank as one of the most intellectual classes this college has thus far produced—ahem!

1904 Class Song.

Tune, "Miss Philippine."

"We're a class full of dash,
As you all know,
We are known as Satan's own,
Everywhere we go.
Naughty-five won't be alive,
When we get through.
Wer'e a happy, scrappy, dashing, slashing,
Merry, daring crew.
There was ne'er a crowd so happy ;
Nor half so scrappy
As this class of four ;
And we're out for fun once more ;
This haughty, naughty, sporty, naughty-four.
You can hear our merry shout,
Every time that we go out,
Full of sport we're just the sort,
Rah, rah, rah, rah, rah—RAH.
We will beat you black and blue, naughty-five,
We won't leave a man of you alive.
For we are a scrappy crew,
As you'll know when we get through.
This haughty, naughty, sporty, naughty-four.
When you hear us coming down the street,
Hide behind the first tree that you meet,
For we're out again to-night,
And we're spoiling for a fight,
We're the class of naughty-four.

Class History.

LEAR the way, here comes a mob, but no, let us take a closer view. It is the Freshmen class.

We were not at all surprised at the other classes taking us for a mob, for surely we are equal to a mob in numbers, although we do not think ourselves that we look like one.

Perhaps the Sophomores will think that we are a mob before we get through college, and, also, through with them.

The first night after entering college we held a meeting, elected a class captain and formed a plan of action for the rush which we were looking forward to with so much joy. All of this was done without the knowledge of the Sophomores, so they had no chance to interfere with our meeting.

I am sure that all of us will remember that first meeting of our class. In that calm, secluded spot we formed some plans which would have proved disastrous to our opponents if we had met them upon the campus.

Much to our regret, but to the joy of the Sophomores, the Freshmen-Sophomore rush did not take place, on account of the President's threat to expel both the class captains should any such event take place. But we would not be doing justice if we did not mention the little scrap that took place on the walk, on the east side of the pond. At first sight it looked as though the Sophs were planning on giving us a bath, but it turned out as might have been expected, for what do the Sophomores think that they could do rushing such a class as '05.

We admit that the Sophomores had the pleasure of patting each other on the back, and exclaiming "the Freshmen rope is ours now," but soon all of their joy was turned into sorrow, for, when they went to look for their own rope, it was gone. Just imagine the contrast in their looks. But a few nights ago they came into the hash-house with very pleasant faces, but to us it was an aggravating smile, now you see them going in and coming out as before, but that little smile that was there the night that they took from their pockets the pieces of our rope has vanished. Their rope is ours.

Our class is composed of many able bodied men, and there is no reason why we should not come off victorious in the rope pull. We are not a class to boast of what we can do, nor what we will do, we prefer rather to wait and see what we can accomplish when we are put to the test. From an athletic standpoint, we can say that we are exceedingly strong, for four of our men are playing on the varsity foot-ball team, and two acting as substitutes. And from all appearances an equal number of our members are well deserving of a place on the varsity base-ball team.

We are a large class, and it has been prophesied that not over one-half of us will graduate. Come now, boys, are we going to allow such a prophesy as this to come true? Surely not, it must not be! Every one of us can graduate if we only go about it in the right way, and make up our minds that we are going to get there. This does not apply to all of us, for already several have passed off certain studies of the Freshmen and Junior years, and one of our number is so far advanced as to be able to accomplish the difficult task of tutoring the upper classmen.

Judging from actions and conversations, we feel safe in saying that a few of us have had a taste of homesickness, but as we have overcome the terrible disease, we must be, as Professor Hasbrouck says, "full of grit."

In one thing we are the envy of the other classes. We have two co-eds. It has not been the custom in the past for those of the female sex to stay at this college for any length of time. But boys, let us act in such a gentlemanly way towards these, our classmates, that they shall be glad to stay and graduate with the class of '05. Also let us act gentlemanly towards our superiors, and show them that we know our place and how to keep it, so that we shall be an honor to the college and our friends.

Review of the Year.

IT IS our purpose, in giving a review of the year, to cover the course of college events in a general way. Since the "02 Index" was published, a great many things have come about which lead us to believe that the college is entering upon a new era of prosperity.

The college band, which was organized last year with M. H. West, '03 as leader, has become a great success. Besides giving several concerts in the band stand, it has fulfilled two engagements out of town. When Senator Gardner reviewed the battalion last spring, he was so well pleased with the band that, after he returned to Boston, he introduced a bill into the legislature for an appropriation of four hundred dollars for its benefit. This bill later passed both houses without difficulty.

President Goodell and the trustees of the college were successful in getting an appropriation bill for eight thousand dollars through the state legislature last spring. Of this, twenty-five hundred dollars was to be put into the chemical department, and the remainder was to be used in general improvement. The result of this was quite noticeable when the students came back this fall. We will speak of that later, however. The subject of a new boarding house was broached at the same time this bill was brought up, but it was not thought expedient to press it at that time. We shall probably have one in a few years, anyway.

Last season we has the best base-ball team on the field that we have ever had. It won one practice game from Amherst, and games from the University of Maine, the University of Vermont, and Middlebury. As there is much promising material in the Freshmen class our prospects seem bright in that line.

During the past year, Professor Lull has been arranging, and adding to the Zoölogical Museum. It is now one of the most attractive features of the college. It has been perfected, apparently, as much as it can be in the space which is at present allowed it.

The extra money put into the chemical department is apparently being used for a good purpose. The chemical force has been greatly increased

There are now seventeen undergraduates working in the laboratory. This gives the students interested in this line of work a fine opportunity to perfect themselves.

When the students came back to college this fall, the first sight that met their eyes was the brown paint daubed on a great many of the college buildings. Everybody wondered why. At any rate the new covering, in most cases, was scarcely better than the old one.

There were many genuine improvements, however. The new arrangement of heating the drill hall from the chapel furnace has given place for a new rubbing room in the drill hall building and, at the same time, the heating of the building by steam is much more easily accomplished than it was by the old method of water-pipes. The introduction of new benches and floors in the Botanical Museum adds greatly to its inside appearance.

We have the largest Freshmen class this fall that has entered here for years. It consists of fifty-seven students including two co-eds. They have contributed four men to the Varsity foot-ball team and they seem to have good men for other lines of athletics. Our hope for them is, that next fall may see two-thirds of them back here again.

The old plan of having three terms in the college year has been abandoned and the "Semester plan" substituted in its place. This is the plan that is being followed in all the larger colleges, and its adoption in our college is a step in the right direction.

The College Senate which was first organized three years ago, up to this time has been little more than a farce. It now, however, seems really set on accomplishing some thing. It has had two co-operative meetings, with a committee of the faculty at President Goodell's house. It has been successful in regulating several of the college customs. It has not yet, however, found a good substitute for the campus rush.

The student body has finally taken action and got rid of that old word which has caused so much grumbling—"Aggie." One morning after chapel, a vote was taken to eliminate it entirely from all college publications. Soon after this, an article appeared in one of the daily papers which stated that the students of the college simply wished to get rid of the nickname "Aggie," but did not object to the word "Agricultural." We don't know where that correspondent got his idea. It is certain that he was sadly misinformed. They do strongly object not only to "Aggie" but also to "Agricultural." They earnestly consider that, since agriculture forms so small a part of our curriculum, the word "Agricultural" greatly misrepresents us before the people of the state. The name that seems most proper and most pleasing is "Massachusetts State College."

As a consequence of this action of the student body, the name of the college paper had to be changed. After a long discussion, the name suggested by Smith, '04 and the cover design submitted by C. A. Tinker, '04 were accepted. The new name is "The College Signal." The design is a maroon flag on a white field, the flag bearing a white "M," and the staff piercing the state shield.

Our foot-ball team has made the most creditable showing of any team that this college has ever put in the field. It has won eight games out of nine, including Wesleyan, Holy Cross, and Amherst. It was beaten by Williams, but only after a hard battle.

One great need that we have felt in past years is to have a coach for the football and baseball teams during the entire season. It has not been possible up to this time, but, it looks as though things were going to be different in the future. After the game with Wesleyan, a circular was sent out to the Alumni and, in less than a week, money enough was received to hire a football coach all next season.

On all occasions where a college yell was needed, it has been felt that our old one was not adequate. Our new yell makes it possible for our fellows to make themselves heard for a long distance. A great step forward has been taken in appointing a regular man to lead the college cheering. Another need is a college song. A committee has been elected to look after this matter also. We may expect to see the result of their work soon.

Surely this college never had a brighter future. Our athletics are prospering, our courses of study are being bettered, our alumni are awakened to the real needs, and our spirit is, more than ever before, forming itself into a real being.

Class History.

It was after the Christmas feast was over that the Short Course men of 1901 arrived at "Massachusetts." Was it any wonder that the classes stood gazing in wonderment when we arrived, for we were far superior in numbers to any Short Course Class of the previous years.

We had not been here many days when it was suggested to us by one of our professors, that we meet some evening and organize a club in order to further the advancement of social relations between the members. A meeting was called on the evening of January 4th, and proved very satisfactory. The necessary officers were elected and the club was given the name of S. C. C.

One night during one of the meetings of this club, we were suddenly interrupted by a shower of snowballs which came pouring in through the open window. The windows were soon closed but still the snow came, bringing glass and everything before it. We rushed for the door only to find our progress there was stayed for the door was securely fastened from the outside. After doing a lot of pulling and prying at the door, also uttering some hot and hearty words, we managed to open the door enough to cut the rope which held it. On reaching the outside of the building we were met with a shower of snowballs; a snowball fight ensued which was closely followed by a rush. The 32 S. C. C. were green at such, but had we been of equal numbers the victory would surely have been ours.

The class represented all ages, for the youth of sixteen to the grayhaired man of sixty were to be found within our ranks. And then we had a lamb and giant, something which every class could not boast of. The lamb soon learned to follow the other members from house to house, never stopping to knock, but, like all little pets, walking in and taking possession before it was granted.

We must not forget to pay respect to our assistant, Professor Wright.

For a long time we were not favored with the presence of this noble youth; but one bright day during the latter part of January, he came walking in with his long and flowing mustache, and dark and curly hair. The way in which he instructed us, and also the assistance that he rendered to the professors whenever one of those learned men chanced to make a mistake was well deserving the credit of a man older in years. Although Cornell proved to be such an excellent instructor he was not long to remain with us, and judging from a financial basis it was just as well he did not stay longer, for the salt that he was carrying away in his pockets each day was beginning to lower the barrel and also to heighten the temper of the instructors.

Why did the giant of our class turn so many colors when Prof. Cooley was giving one of his most instructive lectures. We are of the opinion that the back entrance to Jones' house could, if it could speak, unfold to us the mystery that is lingering on our minds. Keep away, Streeter, maids are not for little boys like you.

Our last evening at college was spent in our club room and it was during that evening that the one whom we had thought so distant and unsociable proved to be a dear and social friend.

How little do we as individuals know the trials and griefs of others, sometimes in our very midst.

After we had completed all the duties imposed upon us, and on the last night of our stay in Amherst, we were invited by N. I. Bowditch of Framingham to partake of a supper especially prepared for us at the hotel.

During the evening the certificates were distributed and prizes awarded, and on the following morning the Short Coursers left for their respective homes with a feeling of love and respect for all the faculty and the students of the Massachusetts Agricultural College.

The Romance of a Skeleton.

Long years ago in sunny France,
A peasant's daughter fair,
Tripped and laughed in merry glee
And sang in the balmy air.

She gleaned the wheat, and trod the grapes
That made the purple wine,
And when the day drew to a close,
She milked the lowing kine.

As time went by, and she older grew
This daughter of the field,
Her winning ways and beauty made
Many a heart to yield.

She smiled upon them all in turn,
But when to her they said
The words so often spoke in vain,
She shook her raven head.

At last there came a count,
He of noble family tree,
And she gave up her rural home,
A favored countess to be.

The daintiest of dresses graced her form,
The rarest of jewels were hers,
And her maids about her wrapped
The richest of furs.

She trod the floors of marble,
With ever a stately grace,
And royalty looked with admiring eyes,
At the woman's lovely face.

For a while her skies were cloudless,
Her life was one of pleasure,
And then her sunshine turned to fog,
And misery filled her measure.

Her husband proved to be untrue,
And unfitted for the strife,
She found herself a helpless waif,
Upon the sands of life.

Down, down she sank, she could not stop,
The misery and the shame,
It was but another time;
When man was the one to blame.

At last upon a crowded street,
The wheels she sank beneath,
And when the hospital they had reached,
Her soul had sought its peace.

But what about her body, I ask,
Could it not at last recline
In quiet, beneath the somber earth,
At least a right divine.

Ah, no, not this its fate to be,
Her life of misery was closed,
But by the edict of men,
Her body found no repose.

She went across the briny deep,
Into a foreign land,
There to spend her days and nights,
Upon a wooden stand.

In Dickie's Lab, our friend now hangs,
Suspended in mid-air,
Gazing idly about the room,
With a fixed and vacant stare.

For many a day thus has she hung,
With never a sign of protest,
Ever a mute and willing problem,
A student's knowledge to test.

Her teeth are gone, her ribs are broken,
Her head now off, now on,
Aids the Prof. to give his lectures,
To furnish the photographer fun.

Her hand is taken by any man,
And never a blush she shows,
Although I hardly would believe,
That half the men she knows.

Ah, such are the vicissitudes of time!
Such the fickleness of rank!
Full many a time, with many a one
Has fortune played such a prank.

And any of us in time to come,
When our career is done,
May grace the walls of science halls,
A grinning skeleton.

The Student's Dream;

or, The Bag of Wind.

A student dreamed of the Blokey's pod,
That never was lank and lean like a rod,
But round and fat and full of old rye;
A goodly sight for a student's eye.
The little fat Blokey sat in his chair,
And cast at the wall a stony stare.

How to promote the ones he should not,
Was working and turning beneath his top-knot,
E'en as he thought and looked around,
His pod began to dwindle down.
A hissing sound as of 'scaping steam,
Or tire torn gaping, changed the scene.

"Dear me! what's this that sounds so loud,"
My pod of which I've been so proud,
All gone! and I, then all will say,
Will simply pass as Johmie A.,
Without my pod I'd ne'er be known,
I'd drill demerits all alone.

"Now I must quickly find some friend,
Who will, perhaps, this rupture mend,
Before it gets a wider rend,
That it may yet again distend.
Coporal Tinker! he's the man,
In tactics, sure, he'll touch the pan."

"In some way or other he will and can
Preserve me yet a round, fat man,
Or there is 'Tabby,' the Man of Schemes,
I think his schemes could turn to seams,
And that, perhaps, by needle and thread,
He may tide me o'er," the Blokey said.

Just then a rap on the door was heard,
And the Blokey in fear himself bestirred,
The door was opened by Doctor Babb,
Whose face the Freshman had made very sad.
The Blokey thought him very wise,
And sought in this great trouble his advice.

Said Babb, "I think it will be well
For you to let me right away sell
The old, you see, and buy anew."
" 'Tis done," said Blokey, "that's my view."
"For then, no one could ever doubt
How full I am around about."

Just then the clock's eight even strokes
Resounded loud, the student woke,
And there before his 'stonished eyes,
The Blokey stood in former guise,
And burst from his lips this awful ban,
"Give ten demerits to this man."

The Lament of a Freshman.

Backward! turn backward! Father Time in your flight,
Feed me on gruel again just for to-night,
I am so weary of sole leather steak,
Petrified doughnuts, vulcanized cake,
Clams that swim in a watery bath,
Butter as strong as Goliath of Gath,
Weary of paying for what I can't eat,
Chewing up rubber and calling it meat,
Weary of taking from sophomore waiters,
Gristley chops and wormy potatoes.
Backward! turn backward! for weary I am,
Give me a whack at my grandmother's jam.
Let me for once sit down at a table,
Where there is anything else than a noisy rabble.
Give me, oh give me some coffee that's good,
Instead of that black, indigestible mud.
Let me have milk that has never been skimmed,
Let me have meat whose hair has been trimmed.
Let me once more have aunt's old-fashioned pie,
And then I'll be content to curl up and die.

“Forget? Not Such as These.”

Bodfish. (Tutoring a class in geometry, draws a straight line on the board.) Do you see that, Esip?”

Esip. “Yes.”

Bodfish. “Do you see that, Pierce?”

Pierce. “Yes.”

Bodfish. “Do you see that, Fahey?”

Fahey. “Yes.”

Bodfish. “Well, that line is not right. We’ll rub it out and begin all over again.”

MASSACHUSETTS AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,

AMHERST, Dec. 6, 1900.

CAPTAIN J. A. ANDERSON, U. S. A. :

Dear Sir: Please excuse me from drill this afternoon. I cannot attend because I have indigestion of the stomach.

Yours very respectfully,

The "Massachusetts" Tales.

(THE PROLOGUE TO THESE TALES WAS PUBLISHED IN THE 1902 "INDEX.")

Naughty-three's Tale.

Once as old stories tell ye,
There was a class named Naughty-three,
At college she was fasteste and beste,
And in her time she whipped all the reste,
More scrappy was there none under the sonne,
Full many a fight and scrape had she begune;
For with her spirit and her brave menne,
She made Naughty-two to look very grenne.
That when to Belchertown they gaily wende,
There rooms were stacked from end to ende,
And then to Prex with his ominous grinne,
This younger class did lie like sinne,
But all escaped sentence severe.
There came to college then a man so queer,
Whose whiskers gave to him the name of Zeke,
Lean and lank was he with monstros beak.
This class which since has won such great renown,
Took him at once to be a clever clown,
And in his room they all did gather rounde,
And make him tell of stories so profounde,
While in his shoes they put of ink so red,
And on the floor they made him go to bed;
Soon then the one who poured the crimson splendor,
Two dollars and a half did make amende
But all these things I might as well forbear,
And tell ye of that flag pole high in air;
From out a shed a barrel soon was brought
And placed high way up there on the top;
How each after other then did stop and look,
And blame the whole goll dern thing on Joe Cook.
This class of which I make mention,
To banquets turned their whole attention.
So down to Springfield went they with full pride,
Nor never from the Sophomores did they hide,
But to the Cooley House they then did hie,

When they had seen the ballet girls so flye.
 Full hours three they ate and jested well,
 And, never once a thought of woe did tell.
 But back to Amherst in the morning came,
 While not a man was feeling just the same.
 And then to the reception went this class,
 Where much of ice-cream did they pinch at last;
 And out upon the campus spread the clothes,
 So thus at last their Freshmen year did close.
 And when again this class came in the Falle,
 Fresh Naughty-four was not in it at all,
 For when upon the campus they did meet,
 They found Naught-three had never yet been beate.
 Upon the walke the Freshmen then were taught,
 That they upon the bordering grass must walk;
 While Doc and Jones to 'crease the junkshop store,
 Did pick up pens, pencils, buttons galore.
 Forthwith this class went to a noted place,
 And borrowed grapes to feed their smiling face.
 While others to a cider mill did hie,
 So quickly lock and windows open pryed,
 And soon from out a cask the wine did sip,
 And homeward heavy laden did they skip.
 Melons they too did bring into the line,
 The Freshmen, they did kindly take the rind.
 In October the greatest of all scraps,
 Happened north of the college a few laps.
 The Freshmen, then the class of Naughty-four,
 Did start to practice on their rope once more;
 And then this wondrous class of Naughty-three
 Did see another chance for gallantrie.
 So down the hill they charged pell-melle,
 And on the Freshmen and their rope they felle.
 A fight there was, no mortal e'er saw such,
 And every Freshmen there was hurt so much,
 That Cooley to their rescue quickly sped,
 Took home the rope and hid it 'neath his bed.
 But now this class, they next did fool his spouse,
 The rope they took from out his lowly house:
 And on that day was heard he to confesse,
 "Its up to me to buy a rope, I guesse,"
 To Hampton then to buy a rope did go,
 And came to see the Freshmen lose it so.
 One morning Babby kick'd up a rumpus,
 For all his chairs were strewn on the campus.
 But West, fearing the loss of his good jobe,
 Did take them back and so the fun did robe.
 Now on the gridiron they did contende,
 As through the Freshmen's lines their men did sende,

Aud when they had scored their fifteen points,
The Freshmen left the field their wounds to annoint.

As was in olden times the custome,
This class had planned a celebrationne.
So down they quickly sat for to reflect,
Of many things wi h which they might connect,
And then from out Bill Brooks's scientific pens,
They extracted four fat fine high grade hens.
Full many thing this noble class did eate,
And drink of cider, hard and swete,
Their banquet room did look upon inspection,
Like to an "Index" sheet without correction.

To Deerfield then to supper they did wende,
And of their stock of cash did muche spende ;
When in the meeting they did try to enter,
Back to the hotel were they sooove sente,
When all had ate and drunk their belly fulle,
With many a song and yell did homeward pulle ;
Full many a man could not next day y-tell,
What after supper that night had befell.

One night to band rehearsal came old Babb,
And left his horse outside the vet'nary lab.,
The horse did on his halter pull most harde
And end at last up in Prof. Cooley's yarde.

One night Prof. Babson's chairs did all take wing,
And out on the Isle were seen next morning ;
While on the bank the engineers did surmyse,
And many plans for rescue did devyse,
But only when the water was withdrawu,
The chairs from off the island then were horne.

Once more responding to the battle call,
They licked the bloody Freshmen at base-ball.
Commencement came to cut our story shorte,
And back to their respective homes they gotte,
When back as upper classmen they did came,
They found the college still was just the same,
But the faculty had set such a pace,
That nothing but the stoutest hearts could face.
At study now this class has just beguune,
And so, 'twill last until its course is runne.

An Ordinary Recitation.

Professor Brooks. "Mr. Peebles, what have you to say on the subject assigned you?"

Peebles. "At first I was at a loss at the unseemly preponderance of the homogeneous conglomeration, which geologically speaking, presented itself in a most incomprehensible aspect. But after listening to your most edifying and lugubrious expostulation upon the formation of this particular section of terra firma, it instantaneously became plainly evident to my intricate frame of mind.

Thinking to enlighten my hungry intellect, I excavated to some considerable depth, making, in fact, a depression of some three hundred millimeters. I found this irregular configuration and stratification of the particles to run continuously downward as far as I had exhumed the debris, which, when taken in combination with the extraordinary fact, that fossil-like structures indicating the presence of phylum echinodermatas were in evidence, proves beyond the bane of doubtfulness that this soil was formed during the Tri-Asic or Stonacious Age.

North College.

In North College on one corner is a wrecked and wretched room,
I am going to tell the story of its life and then its doom.
Two students, Doc and Gerry had made this place their home ;
While through adjoining premises these two were wont to roam,
The only things that here were safe were those that were nailed down ;
Annexation was their hobby and had given them renown.
Back to this room now we'll wander, gaze upon its floor and wall ;
There we have a perfect junk-shop, every detail, large and small,
In the spring-time they got thoughtful, and from out this room they went ;
Down one story out from glory to a room of peace were bent.
Gerry now alone is with us, Doc the scrapper of our class, he has gone and left us weeping ;
Chucked by Drew, the plant house ass.

Beauty Contest.

A Chance of a Lifetime.

The 1903 "Index" offers a prize of a handsomely bound, morocco covered, gilt edged "Index" to the person who picks out the best looking man from the above group.

Pick out the man, whom you think is best looking, and send us his number—the numbers begin at the left and run 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, to the right—together with your full name and address. No person can have more than one guess. All letters must be received by us on or before June 20, 1903.

Address all communications to "1903 Index," "Massachusetts," Amherst, Mass

Nonsense.

"Care to our coffin adds a nail, no doubt,
And every laugh so merry draws one out."

Girl in Brattleboro: (seeing Fat Gay), "I'd like to have that boy to play with."

Father: "When you go to Buffalo don't drink any water."

Phil: "All right, father, I won't."

Ahcarn: (speaking about rope-pull time, 2 minutes.) "After the first four or five minutes I got all tired out. If it lasted another two minutes I couldn't have pulled a pound."

Jones: (In chemistry.) "Is the red color of lobsters due to the iron in them."

Professor: "Perhaps; but a certain class of people are called 'lobsters' because they are green."

Pebbles: (In agriculture.) "Well, professor, what is the best kind of tobacco for the pipe?"

Professor: "Mr. Tinker, have you this example?"

Tinker: "No Sir; I think I must have made some mathematical mistake."

Wollheim: "I don't know what it is but I can prove it."

Prof. Mills: "Mr. Brooks, what are the three great cycles mentioned in the text?"

Brooks: "The Caedmonian Cycle, the a-cle, Cyncwulf Cycle, and the a-a-D. G. K. Cycle."

Pebbles: (As Professor Lull shows fossil remains of Silurian Age.) "When was that carving done, professor?"

Prof. Howard: "Does it take a formula to saw wood?"

Bacon: "No, sir, it takes a saw."

Webster: (In chemistry.) "Can a candle be taken high enough in the air so that the flame will freeze?"

Prof. Ostrander: "Mr. Martin, would you sooner live an infinite number of years, or zero years?"

Martin: "An infinite number."

Ostrander: "Well, I guess you'll have to before you master this subject."

Prof. Smith: (As someone tries to help a man at the board.) "No coaching from the sidelines."

A Morning Chat.

(Professor Babson meets Mr. A.—, who had his knee hurt in a ball game a few days before.)

Professor. "Why how do you do Mr. A——. How is your knee this morning? Just look at that dog of mine. (Here, here, Checkers! come, old fellow.) Isn't he a daisy? Why I think more of that dog than I do of my wife. He is very intelligent."

Mr. A——. "Yes, he must be. He comes when you call him."

Professor. "Yes, but look at his form, look at that for an ear, will you?"

Mr. A——. "Fine, fine, and two of them just alike."

Professor. "And look at that hair, so smooth and soft."

Mr. A——. "Great! I never saw a dog with just that hair before."

Professor. "Oh! that dog is a wonder, and no mistake. But he's not feeling well now. Been sick. Something the matter with him. Don't know what. I doctored him up last night and I guess he'll come round all right."

Mr. A——. "Well that is too bad."

Professor. "Well, I'm in a hurry. Got lots of work to do. So good-day. I'm glad about that knee."

Mr. A——. "Good-day Professor, I'm sorry for that dog."

Individual Records of the Class of 1903.

"The fashion wears out more apparel than the man."

WILLIAM ETHERINGTON ALLEN

was born in Lynn, Mass., June 25, 1881. He entered the Lynn public schools on the morning of Sept. 8, 1886, and began his education. At the age of 17 he moved to Winthrop, taking his family with him, and entered the Winthrop high school. He was graduated from here with the class of 1900, and late in the fall entered the Sophomore class at Massachusetts. Mr. Allen ranks high as a student; is artist of the 1903 Index; a member of the $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$ fraternity and withal has distinguished himself by playing short-stop on the 1903 class baseball team

*"O, what may man within him hide,
Though angel on the outer side."*

STEPHEN CARROLL BACON

first came to light in the town of Leominster, Mass., July 24, 1881. He lived an uneventful life until September, 1886, when he first went to school. Without any serious mishap he reached the high school and captured a diploma. Being much pleased with himself he stayed at the high school another year. Then he entered the Massachusetts Agricultural college. Mr. Bacon is a member of the 1903 Index board, a D. G. K. man, and played on the class baseball team.

"He Will Bear Watching."

GEORGE LEVI BARRUS

of Goshen, was born December 15, 1880, in that town. Goshen, as everyone knows, is a little village in Western Massachusetts, which has a population of three hundred and three whites, and thirteen Polanders, when George is at home. At an early age Mr. Barrus determined to study for the ministry. He entered the Sanderson Academy at Ashfield and received a first-class moral training. He changed his mind about the ministry business and entered "Massachusetts" with the class of 1903. Mr. Barrus belongs to the D. G. K. fraternity; played on the class baseball and football teams; was captain of the rope pull team; and is now class-captain and business manager of the 1903 Index.

"In combat, his the vigorous arm of youth."

HOWARD C. BOWEN.

South Boston was the birthplace of Howard Chandler Bowen, and the time of his birth March 26, 1882. When a little over a year old he emerged and started life in Needham, Mass. Most of his early life was spent in playing "Indian" in the woods along the river Charles.

On his sixteenth birthday his grandfather made him a present of a horse, which Howard immediately mounted and started for Rutland, Mass., to which place his folk, by a strange coincident had moved that very day. Mr. Bowen was graduated from the Rutland High school in '99 and entered college the succeeding fall. He has become noted for his surgical operations and will answer to the name "Doc." He played on the class football and baseball team, and is a member of the Q. T. V. fraternity.

"And what is all this noise?"

MR. PHILIP WHITNEY BROOKS.

This gentleman comes from the city of Cambridge, where he was born. The date of his birth was May 15, 1883. The first few years of his life were spent in oblivion; the next few in chasing round trying to find a school that would hold him. He finally entered the Carleton Preparatory School, learned all that he could learn, received his diploma and entered "Massachusetts." Here he has made his M by playing on the varsity football team. He played on the class football team, the baseball team, of which he was captain the second year; is a Q. T. V. fraternity man; and assistant business manager of the 1903 Index and of the Football Association.

"He is possessed of the fourth dimension."

JOSEPH GERSHOM COOK

happened about the year 1880, in the town of Clayton, Mass. He layed the foundation of his education in a little district school, under the instruction of an old-fashioned "Schoolmarm" who always carried a hickory rule as large as a baseball bat, more or less. He was graduated from the Great Barrington High School with the class of '99. Entered "Massachusetts," Sept. 7, '99, and Powers' melon patch about two weeks later. Joseph is a member of the C. S. C.; played on the class baseball team two years; captained the basket ball team; and always carries a silver spoon in his pocket.

"And e'en his failings lean to virtue's side."

HENRY JAMES FRANKLIN,

commonly known as "Ben," "Benny," "Bening," hails from a town up the river by the name of Bernardston. He was not born there, however, but in Guilford, Vermont, on Feb. 10, 1883. When Ben was eleven years old, his parents moved to Bernardston, where he prepared for college in Powers Institute, entering the Massachusetts Agricultural College in '99.

Franklin saw his first game of football on the campus, liked the idea, and straight way made the class team, the second team, and the varsity in rapid succession. He is on the 1903 "Index" board; is a member of the college Senate; took second prize in the Burnham prize speaking; belongs to the Q. T. V. and the Y. M. C. A.

*"O bed! O bed! Delicious bed!
That heaven on earth to the weary head."*

CHARLES PARKER HALLIGAN

was born in the city of Boston on the day of the assassination of President Garfield. When about 6 years old he moved to Roslindale, a pretty little village about five miles west by south-southeast from the State House, Boston. He attended the "Charles Sumner" school, and later the English High, in which he took a post-graduate course. While here he played on the baseball and football teams and gained that experience which has made him such an excellent coach. Mr. Halligan entered the Sophomore class of "Massachusetts" in the Fall of '00. He plays on the college football and baseball teams; the class basket ball team; belongs to the D. G. K. fraternity; and is a member of the Senate. He dabbles in poetry.

"The whitest man of his race."

WILLIAM LANE HOOD

began this life at sometime and somewhere near Birmingham, Ala. Like many other Alabama boys he began young. His early life was spent in close attendance at the district school which held a three months session every two years. At the age of 20 Mr. Hood entered Talladega college. He was graduated from the Normal course in '99 and immediately entered the Massachusetts Agricultural college, and has not had a sound night's sleep since, his dreams always being troubled by a ghost of mathematics in a physic-al form. Mr. Hood played on the class football team and is one of the most patriotic men in college.

"I'm but a gatherer and disposer of men's stuffs."

MR. GERALD DENISON JONES

was born in Boston, Mass., in the year 1880. He received his early education in the public schools of Framingham and was graduated from the Framingham High School and Academy with the class of '99. He entered the Massachusetts Agricultural college in the fall of the same year, and immediately assumed the title of "Gerry." He is noted for his wit, his stories, his run, and his room and his room mate "Gerry" is class Secretary and Treasurer, belongs to the Q. T. V. fraternity; is on the 1903 "Index" board; and is one of the principal actors in all the class athletic contests.

"There's mischief in this man."

NEIL FRANCIS MONAHAN

was born in Framingham, Mass., June 21, 1879. His early life was spent in chasing around looking for trouble. He was a close attendant at the public schools and was graduated from the Framingham High School and Academy with the class of '98. He next spent a year at home, recuperating and then entered "Massachusetts." Since that time he has been very busy getting out of trouble. Money played on the class basket ball team; is a C. S. C. man; is on the "College Signal" board and is editor-in-chief of the 1903 "Index."

"Another argument against immigration."

PAUL NERSES NERSERIAN

struck out in the city of Narsh, Turkey, about 28 years ago. He attended the public school of that place until he entered the Narsh academy in 1892. Graduating from there he entered the Central Turkey college. Four years later he received his diploma and started for the United States, and found his way to Kingston, Ohio. Here he stayed for four months and then entered the employment of T. D. Cook & Co. in Boston. Mr. Nerserian entered the Massachusetts Agricultural college in '99, and is withal quite an original feature.

"I'm but a stranger here below, Heaven is my home."

ALBERT PARSONS,

a descendant of Governor Bradford of Plymouth, was born in North Amherst, June 1, 1883. He began to attend school one month before he was 6 years old. He was admitted to the High School at the age of 13, took the two year course, and spent the year following at home. In the Fall of '99, he entered the class of 1903, at this institution. Albert is a member of the Q. T. V. fraternity; an active member of the Prohibition club, and a good student.

"His words of learned length and thundering sound, Amaze the wondering students gathered round."

WILLIAM WARRINGTON PEBBLES

hit this earth July 31, 1880, in the city of Washington, D. C. After completing the grammar and high school courses in Washington he entered "Massachusetts." Little Willie captured the second prize in the Burnham prize speaking when a Freshman, and first prize when a Sophomore. He has tried hard to make a hit in athletics, but failing in this, he determined to be first in something and now holds the class record as a bluffer. He is a member of the College Shakespearean Club, and one of the Reading Room Directors.

All he wants is to be let alone."

ELMER MYRON POOLE.

In the southeastern part of this state, lies the historic town of Dartmouth, the city of clams and lobsters. Poole hails from this spot. He was born there, and he lives there yet. His early life ran smoothly and quietly until the time he graduated from the preparatory department of the New Bedford University and entered this college. Then his troubles began. Four letters every day, and each one has got to be answered!

Mr. Poole is a member of the D. G. K. fraternity; he is a good writer and a first-class artist.

"One of those well oiled dispositions which turn on the hinges of the world without creaking."

EDWARD GEORGE PROULX

was born in Hatfield, Mass., in 1881. After finishing the grammar school he spent a year and a half in attendance at Smith Academy in the daytime and Smith College at night. He was captain of the Smith Academy football team while at that institution, and for two years afterward; attended Child's Business College in Springfield, and later the Northampton Business College. Entered "Massachusetts" in the fall of '99 and succeeded in passing off book-keeping. Mr. Proulx played on the class baseball, football and basketball teams; the varsity football team; is a member of the $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$ fraternity.

Bacchus has drowned more men than Neptune.

RICHARD HENDRIE ROBERTSON

is a descendant from the canny Scot on one side and old Noah on the other. He attended school as any ordinary fellow might, but at the age of sixteen wandered from the educational walls and became a printer's devil, and soon after a devil of a printer. But finding that the bed of a press was not a place of repose, and that all forms are not suitable to clasp to the manly bosom, he desired to change his vocation and straightway entered this college. Bill, as he is generally known, belongs to the D. G. K. fraternity; is a member of the Senate; is an associate editor of the "College Signal;" is Reading Room director, and has charge of the chemical department.

"He was a man of unbounded stomach."

EDWARD BENIAH SNELL.

was born Oct. 27, 1879, in Methuen, Mass. He attended school "every-once-in-a-while" and staid at home "every-now-and-then." He held the position of first lieutenant in the Methuen High School Cadets. Edward entered the Massachusetts Agricultural College late in year of '99. He plays on the varsity football team; the class baseball team; is a member of the Senate; the Q. T. V. fraternity; is a reading-room director, and one of the editors of the 1903 "Index."

"A little pot is soon hot."

CHARLES SAMUEL TINKHAM

hails from Boston, where he was born on Dec. 1, 1880. Having passed over the lower grades he entered the Mechanic Arts High school in the Fall of '96, but was obliged to leave on account of weak eyes. He attended Bryant & Stratton's Commercial college for a short time, then went to work on a farm in Dixfield, Maine. Not liking rural life he entered "Massachusetts" in October, 1899, being then about five feet, three inches in height. Tinkham is a member of the D. G. K. fraternity, and a right smart mathematician.

"Compared to him, Moses himself was something of a devil."

WILLIAM EDGAR TOTTINGHAM

was born in Templeton, Mass., about twenty years ago. His early school days passed quietly and quickly. One day a strong desire to see more of the world seized upon him, so off he started and—home he came two days later having seen all of the world that a boy seven years old could be expected to have seen. He was graduated from Powers Institute in Bernardston, and entered the class of 1903, M. A. C. "Tot" belongs to the Q. T. V. fraternity; the glee club; plays in the band; and is noted for his poetry. He played on the class football team.

"He has a face like a benediction."

WINTHROP VOSE TOWER.

Roxbury, Mass. was the birthplace of Winthrop V. Tower. Shortly after his birth, in 1881, his family moved to Cohasset taking "Winnie" with them. Winthrop first went to school in Cohasset and then to the Chauncy Hall School in Boston. The most of his time however was spent in a catboat off the shores of Scituate. Tower entered "Massachusetts" with the class of Naughty-three; was class captain; played on the class football team two years; is captain of the class track team; and belongs to the $\Phi \Sigma \kappa$ fraternity

"Let me have music dying, and I seek no more delight."

MYRON HOWARD WEST

was born in the noted city of Belchertown, Dec. 19, 1880. His early life was spent in counting the days from one cattle show to another. On account of ill health he was obliged to suspend his school labors for three years but in the Fall of '99, entered this institution, and immediately began a reformation. The first time he went home he brought back Captain John A. Anderson, U. S. A., to aid in maintaining better discipline. He next composed a lot of music and organized a band to play it. The band is still in existence, the music is not.

West is associate editor of the "College Signal;" a member of the Q. T. V. fraternity.

Editorial.

In presenting this, the XXXIII volume of the "Index" to the public, we have just a few words to say. We believe that in order to be a true representation of what a class can do, the work in any class book should be done by that class. The "Index" is the class book of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, and in order to make it a true class book we have placed nothing in our literary columns that was not done by members of the class of nineteen hundred and three.

The Work of the Fraternity Conference.

The Fraternity Conference was organized early in the year '99 for the purpose of maintaining amiable relations between the fraternities, and in order to promote the social life at college.

About the first real work done by the conference was to establish a rule that no freshman could be pledged to join any fraternity before the opening day of the winter term; and that any man who should enter college after that day should not be pledged for at least one month after he had become enrolled. Later, to meet the requirements made necessary by the change from terms to semesters, this rule was changed to read "the first day of college after the Christmas recess," instead of "the opening day of the winter term."

This rule has now been in force for over two years and has proved very satisfactory. The interval which must elapse between the time a man comes to college and the time in which he is eligible to join a fraternity gives the man a chance to judge the characters of the several fraternities and to choose the one most suited to his taste; while on the other side it gives the members of the fraternities a chance to judge the men and pick out the ones they think desirable.

The Conference has also done much along social lines. In connection with the Ladies of the Faculty they held three social gatherings in the chapel. Young ladies from Amherst and surrounding towns were present and more enjoyable evenings could not be imagined.

The Conference also contributed largely toward the lectures on natural science which were given at intervals during the winter, under the direction of the Natural History Society.

The Fraternity conference is doing good work both for the individual fraternities and for the college in general and we hope to see it continue to work along the lines which it has begun.

Co-Education.

The subject of Co-education is far too broad and deep to be treated in the small space which we can give to it, so we will treat the subject only so far as it pertains to our Institution.

While from the very moment of the founding of the college the problem of co-education has been considered, until the present time it has not been of radical importance for the reason that none but male students have presented themselves for instruction. Within the past few years the condition has been changed. With the class of 1903 the first real co-ed. entered the Massachusetts Agricultural College, and stayed for a full year. With the class of 1905 two more young ladies have entered college. And the questions arise, "What can we do with these students?" and "Is it for the best interest of the Massachusetts Agricultural College to adopt this policy of co-education?"

The Faculty have answered the first question by making these students adhere as closely as seems expedient to the regular curriculum. To the second question we would answer, "No;" first, because we are not prepared for this class of students and it will take time and money to become prepared, and second, we can see no advantage to be derived from the policy.

The principal argument in favor of co-education is that constant intercourse with persons of the opposite sex will tend to do away with that boorishness which so often shows predominately in college men. But this argument is ill fitted to our case, for situated as we are, in the immediate neighborhood of two colleges for women, the men can enjoy as much of the society of young ladies as they see fit.

The best argument that can be brought to bear in favor of co-education in our college is simply this: That although the women are made to stick very closely to the curriculum as prescribed for all students, there are some subjects which they do not have to take. Now, if one person can be excused from a subject, why not another? And looking at it in this way we can see how co-education may indirectly be of benefit to the college by hastening the coming of the much sought after elective courses.

But aside from this we cannot see how, with so many good colleges for women in the close vicinity, it would benefit a woman to attend our college or how it would benefit our institution to have women students.

The Abolition of "Aggie."

Perhaps the most important change which has taken place in the college during the past year has been the abolition of the unofficial name "Aggie." This action was not a thing done on the impulse of the moment, but done after much deliberation and after the lapse of considerable time.

The first actual movement in this direction was taken in the Fall of '99, when the Athletic association changed the athletic letters from the old M. A. C. to the new M., signifying "Massachusetts." This movement was followed soon after by an attempt on the part of the Alumni Advertising Committee to have the name of the "Aggie Life" changed, stating as their reasons for such action that it was their belief that better results would follow their efforts in the advertising line if the name "Aggie" or "Agricultural" was not placed in such a prominent position. The attempt at that time was unsuccessful.

Later however, the "Aggie Life" board giving way to pressure brought upon it by the student body, decided to change the name of that paper, but on presenting the matter before the alumni found so much opposition that the idea was, for the time being, given up.

The adoption of a new college yell was the next step in the onward movement. The old yells were never satisfactory because they could not produce the volume which a college yell should have and moreover gave predominance to the word "Aggie" to the exclusion of everything else. The new yell is very satisfactory, giving plenty of volume and putting the emphasis on the word "Massachusetts." The adoption of a new college song, and the changing of the old songs so that "Aggie" does not appear in them has further advanced this movement.

The students were not satisfied with the manner in which the "Aggie Life" board let the matter of changing the name drop, and so taking the matter in their own hands voted to abolish the old unofficial title "Aggie" and cut it out of all printed matter with which the students had anything to do. This action, of course, compelled the "Aggie Life" board to change the name of that paper, and accordingly after much discussion the name "College Signal" was adopted.

These are all important changes but they are not the end. There are greater changes coming, all tending toward that greatest change, namely; striking out the word "Agricultural" from the name of the college.

The Massachusetts State College.

"What's in a name?" There is a great deal in a name and a more unfortunate name than Massachusetts Agricultural could hardly have been chosen for this institution. Agricultural, farmer. If there is any one thing a city boy dislikes to be called it is a farmer. If there is any one thing a country boy dislikes to be called it is a farmer. There is a natural prejudice against that word and just so long as young men are prejudiced against that word, just so long will they decide to go to some college where that word does not appear in the name.

But not only is the name "Agricultural" distasteful but it is misleading. By far the greatest number of people whom we meet, if they know anything about the college at all, firmly believe that most of every student's time is taken up with actual farm work such as planting, hoeing and milking, and it is useless to tell them differently.

The argument has been brought forward time and time again that the college was established for the benefit of the agricultural classes, and that those who do not wish that sort of an education can go elsewhere. But suppose that all those who do not wish to take agriculture should go elsewhere, where would the college be? All the students could be accommodated in the recitation room in the barn.

No, the agricultural class has had forty years in which to show their appreciation of the advantages of a good agricultural college and they have not done so. And it is now time that some other policy should be pursued.

We have often heard the statement that since the college was founded for the purpose of promoting agriculture, any change in the name would result in a very serious financial loss. Now we do not see how this would follow. Other colleges whose names do not in any way pertain to agriculture are receiving just as much money from the United States government as is the "Massachusetts Agricultural College," and changing the name would, we believe, have the effect of bringing in larger appropriations from the State legislature. This view is in accordance with statements made by Senator Gardner, chairman of the State Military committee, in an address before the college battalion, at which time Mr. Gardner expressed the same ideas as may be found in the following extract from the letter written to the editor upon this subject.

"I am in favor of changing the name of the college from Massachusetts Agricultural College to Massachusetts State College in order that it may be more clearly brought home to the people of this state that they are supporting an institution of learning of which they may well be proud.

In the western part of Massachusetts the work and aims of the college are doubtless thoroughly well-known and understood, but I venture to say that in Essex county, where I live, not one man in ten is aware of the fact that the state supports any institution of learning except the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Of those few who are aware of the existence of a college in Amherst, supported by the state, the greater number go little further than surmising in a vague sort of a way that somewhere or other in the western counties there is a sort of agricultural experiment station where young men are taught new fangled and comparatively useless methods of ploughing and fertilizing. I am ashamed to say that my own view of the scope of your institution was but little broader until my visit last year.

Where I had expected to find a large farm run at an equally large loss, I found instead a splendidly equipped college for young men, where among other branches, scientific agriculture is taught and, indeed constitutes a generous part of the curriculum. I found an institution of learning of the highest class where young men could be fitted for meeting the problems of this world in any field.

As you may probably remember, the Committee of the Legislature that visited Amherst was a large one, and I took special pains to inquire of such of my colleagues as had not made a previous visit just what their knowledge of the place was before arrival. In almost every case the senators and representatives from the eastern part of Massachusetts had little more than the knowledge which had come to them from voting for your annual appropriation.

I found that while the eastern representatives felt that a change of name would greatly enhance the standing of the college in the eyes of their respective constituencies, the western members, on the other hand, failed to take this view of the matter.

I, for one, should long ago have taken a livelier interest in your institution if I had realized that it was a state college, a real institution of learning.

I certainly should have realized this fact had the name been Massachusetts State College instead of Massachusetts Agricultural College.

I am well aware that many people hold to the opinion that it makes no appreciable difference whether you call a college by one name or another. Personally, I do not subscribe to this view. Unless there is some good reason for retaining the present name, I submit that the fact alone that it is distasteful to the students should be conclusive reason for a change.

It may be that in many cases vanity alone influences a student's view of this matter; but, of course, this is far from being the case with the bulk of the student body. Even if the objection of every student were based on vanity alone I should feel, nevertheless, that the name ought to be changed unless good reason could be shown to the contrary. We know that vanity is a human attribute and that wounded vanity is a source of trouble and loss of strength in a college, as in all other human institutions.

I could learn of no cause for the reluctance to abandon the present name beyond the natural conservatism which exists among your alumni and faculty.

I am reminded in closing that the opponents of my views advance as an argument against my position that the name "Massachusetts" already appears in the title of the college. That is very true as far as official documents are concerned; but who ever hears the title used in ordinary conversation? For years the public has been used to hearing of the students of the "Amherst Agricultural College," a clumsy expression, which has almost inevitably degenerated into "Amherst Aggies." If however the name were changed to "Massachusetts State College," the public, undoubtedly, would speak of the institution as the "State College" a result which has developed in the case of the college of the State of Maine.

Unless arguments can be brought forward which hitherto have escaped me, the fact that the present name is a source of irritation to the whole student body, should to my mind be sufficient to render a change imperative."

These are the opinions of Senator Gardner and they are also the opinion of this editorial board. We believe that, providing the name of our college were changed no bad effects would result from a financial point of view; that all dissatisfaction and uneasiness among the student body would be done away with; and that many new and desirable men would enter college.

Athletics.

The past year in athletics at the Massachusetts Agricultural college has been, in the main, very successful. But two teams, however, were put in the field.

No college basket-ball team was organized as the work of that team in the past has not been successful, not because the teams lacked in proficiency but because it has been impossible with the limited money at their disposal to schedule games with other than local Y. M. C. A. and town teams. And winning these games brings no real credit to the college. There was, however no lack of enthusiastic basket-ball players and a series of inter-class games was played. These games proved very interesting and helped more than a little to keep the athletic men in training throughout the winter.

Early in the spring it was decided not to place a track team in the field, as it was thought that with our limited number of men, and quickly exhausted supply of money, to try and run a track team and baseball team at the same time, would result disastrously to both.

The baseball season opened early in March with practice at the bat and throwing. This work was not altogether satisfactory however as it had to be done in the Drill Hall and the light was insufficient, being so bad that on cloudy days it became impossible to see a thrown ball and practice could not be held.

As early as the weather would permit practice was begun out doors. Three practice games were played with Amherst before beginning the regular schedule. A winning game was played until near the end of the season when the team slumped and lost three games in succession.

The football season was a remarkable one. Starting in to practice two weeks later than usual and having had the services of a coach for only two weeks, the team won from Holy Cross, our stumbling block for years, Wesleyan, the Triangular league champions, the Springfield Training school, Amherst and Tufts. Truly a remarkable record.

The game with Amherst is worthy of special notice. Our team having had the services of a coach but two weeks went down onto that field and won the cleanest, prettiest game of football that could be imagined. The Amherst team was heavier than our own, had the advantage of playing on home grounds, and for two weeks had been holding secret practice under the direction of three coaches. This game showed what our team could do and what they ought to do. With the loss of but three men next year, two of whom have played most of the season on the sidelines, the prospects of a strong team next season are very bright.

The Military Department.

One of the most important features of our college is the military department and more real good is being derived from this part of our exercises than from any other. The exercise obtained while on drill is the only physical exercise which many of us get, and the only physical culture which most of us derive while in college.

Taking the students as they first come and watching them day by day, great improvement can be noticed in their set-up, general appearance, and in their neatness of person. Nothing serves so much to keep the appearance of each man, and the condition of his rooms in good shape as the discipline exacted by the military instructor.

Captain J. A. Anderson is to be highly commended for his zeal and the manner in which he has taken hold and actually built up a battalion out of a batch of raw recruits. There is however one change we would like to see made.

Now while we do not wish to criticise the military department in any but a kindly way, we cannot forbear this opportunity for expressing our opinion in the manner in which promotions are made.

Already we have one or two instances in which underclass men have been raised to positions in fulfilling the duties of which they are obliged to command upperclass men. We do not think that such conditions should exist and do not believe that it is for the best interest of the battalion that they should be fostered.

It is not pleasant for an upperclass man to be ordered by a lowerclass man, and it is anything but pleasant for an underclass man to be obliged to give orders to a junior or a senior. By all the laws of college tradition, upperclass men should be honored and respected by the members of the lower classes, and we maintain that this respect does not and cannot exist, while lowerclass men are placed in positions of command. The military department of this college was founded for the purpose of instruction in drill and military science. Now if this instruction is to be complete it is not only necessary that the cadet should be taught the routine of marching and handling a gun, but he should also be taught how to perform the duties of an officer, and the best way in which this can be done is of course, by giving him practical experience.

This can be done by choosing the officers from the senior and junior classes, always selecting the commissioned officers from the senior class. This plan, if strictly followed out, would, we believe prove of benefit to every man in college, and do away with much of the spirit of dissatisfaction which is now being shown toward the department.

Captain Anderson has been working hard to get the necessary authority, and equipage for an annual encampment. The custom is being practised with great success in other similar institutions, and proves to be of great advantage as more can be learned in one week of actual experience in the field than in years of theoretical training. The encampment would be eagerly looked forward to by the students; it would help to bring the college before the eyes of the public, and would create that much to be desired quality of enthusiasm among the cadets.

The Alumni.

Does an alumnus of a college owe any duty to his Alma Mater? If so what is that duty. These are important questions which must be decided to a great extent by each individual alumnus. That an alumnus owes a duty to his Alma Mater goes without saying. He owes a duty to her in the same way as he does to his natural mother.

Have the alumni of the Massachusetts Agricultural College fulfilled their obligations to their college as they should have done? We think that until very recently they have not. But whatever may have been the condition that is past and gone, a new life has been awakened in their bosoms and they are now actively engaged in trying to outstrip one another in the work they can do for the college.

A year ago at the Annual Alumni Banquet, the subject of the growth, or rather the lack of growth of the college was discussed very lively. As a result a committee was appointed to be known as the Alumni Advertising Committee. And it was specifically stated that it was the duty of this committee to advertise the college in every practicable way, for the purpose of getting more students; the expenses of advertising to be borne by the Alumni.

This committee went to work and finally chose the "Aggie Life," as the best medium for their work. Two large, special editions containing accounts of the various departments, pictures of the college grounds, buildings—inside and out—football team, etc., were published. These issues were distributed over the entire state, a copy being sent to every male member of the graduating class in all the larger high and preparatory schools and several copies to the principals of the smaller schools throughout the state. The effect of this effort was beyond all expectation. Almost at once letters of inquiry began pouring into the office of the committee, the whole resulting in the entrance this year of a very large Freshmen class.

In the middle of the football season this fall, it was found that the team could not hope to cope successfully with their opponents without the training to be obtained from a coach; the executive committee of the Athletic Association took the matter in hand, and sent out circulars to about one hundred of the Alumni, stating the circumstances and asking for their support. The returns from this request were immediate and generous. A coach was secured for the remainder of the season, and money enough has been contributed to ensure the statement that next year we shall have a coach all season.

All this has been done through the generosity of the Alumni. Much credit is due the Alumni Advertising Committee and to all those who have aided in bringing about this desired end.

And now at last our work is o'er,
We'll fret and frown and swear no more ;
But to the readers' pleasure leave,
Such work as we have you to give.

And if, perchance, a roast you find,
We only hope you will not mind ;
And nothing rash that you will do,
For we may yet be roasted too.

So when you look upon our work,
You must not think that we did shirk ;
But give us what credit we've won,
From this our book, now fin'ly done.

AMHERST, MASS.

Dr. Paige: "The man with a cinge."

Massachusetts Agricultural College.

A rare chance to obtain a liberal and thoroughly practical education. The cost has been reduced to a minimum. Tuition is free to citizens of the United States. An opportunity is offered to pay a portion of expenses by work.

Three courses of Study are offered: an eleven weeks' practical course in agriculture and kindred sciences; a four years' course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science; and a graduate course leading to the degrees of Master of Science and Doctor of Philosophy.

Instruction. The courses of study as at present constituted include:—

1. Agriculture, theoretical and practical, stock-breeding, drainage and irrigation, special crops.

2. Botany, including horticulture, market-gardening, arboriculture, care of greenhouses, types of cryptogamic orders, and histology.

3. Chemistry. Practice work in the laboratories, qualitative and quantitative analysis, inorganic and organic, adapted to special needs. Geology.

4. Zoölogy, entomology, the preservation of plants from destructive insects, human anatomy, physiology, and hygiene.

5. Veterinary Science. The hygiene, anatomy, physiology, and diseases of domestic animals, giving the student requisite knowledge for the care of stock.

6. Mathematics and physics, including practical work in surveying and roadmaking. Meteorology in its relation to agriculture. Electrical engineering with problems, and practical work with instruments. Civil engineering. Astronomy.

7. English. Care is given to the study of English language and literature, that the student may be able to understand his mother tongue, and use it correctly and efficiently in the expression and enunciation of thought. As a means to this and other ends, Latin may be taken as an elective in Senior year.

8. Modern Languages. French and German are taught, so as to give the student means of acquiring a sufficient mastery of the languages to have access to scientific authorities of France and Germany.

9. Political Science. The course provides for instruction in political economy, that a knowledge may be gained of those established laws of the business world which control the market, finance, and the production and distribution of wealth. Especial attention is given to the economies of agriculture. Science of government is studied, that the duties and privileges of the citizen may be understood.

Advantages. Facilities for illustration include a working library of more than 20,000 volumes, properly classified and catalogued; the State collection of birds, insects, reptiles, and rocks of Massachusetts, with many additions; the Knowlton herbarium of 10,000 species of named botanical specimens; the 1,500 species and varieties of plants and types of the vegetable kingdom, cultivated in the Durfee plant-house; the large collections of Amherst College within easy access; a farm of about 400 acres, divided between the agricultural, horticultural, and experimental departments, embracing every variety of soil, offering splendid opportunities for observing the application of science to the problems of agriculture.

Worthy of especial mention are the laboratories for practical work in chemistry, in zoölogy, and in botany, well equipped with essential apparatus. The Durfee plant-house has been recently rebuilt and greatly enlarged, and a new tool-house and workshop provided for the horticultural department. For the agricultural department, a model barn furnishes the best facilities for storage of crops, care of horses, cattle, sheep and swine, and management of the dairy; it includes also a lecture-room for instruction. For the veterinary department a new and fully equipped laboratory and stable have been provided, where bacteriology and the diseases of animals are studied.

Electives. Out of seventeen studies provided for the Senior Class, fifteen are elective, grouped in eleven separate courses.

Expenses. Board in clubs is about $2.50 per week, and in families, $3.00 to $5.00; room rent, $12.00 to $24.00 per semester; fuel, $7.00 to $13.00 per year; washing, 40 to 50 cents per dozen; military suit, $15.75; books at wholesale prices; furniture, second-hand or new, for sale in town.

Certificates from approved High Schools admit students without examination.

Requisites for admission to the several courses and other information may be learned from the catalogue, to be obtained by application to the President.
